AN ORDINANCE

Amending Chapter 9-3900 of The Philadelphia Code, entitled “Property Licenses and Owner Accountability,” to clarify licensing requirements, authorize the Department to create a Proactive Inspection program, require public reporting related to Code compliance, and establish remedies, damages, and protections for tenants, all under certain terms and conditions.

THE COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF PHILADELPHIA HEREBY ORDAINS:

SECTION 1. Legislative Findings. Council finds that:

(1) A safe, habitable, and well-maintained home is a fundamental necessity for health, stability, and economic mobility. Yet, too many rental properties in Philadelphia fail to meet basic standards of habitability. Approximately 40% of Philadelphia rental homes need repairs and 30-45% of rental units operate without proper licensing, exposing tenants to unsafe, unfit, and imminently dangerous conditions.

(2) Philadelphia is trending toward a majority-renter city, with approximately half of all households currently renting their homes. More than half of these renters are cost-burdened, paying more than 30% of their income toward rent, limiting their ability to absorb additional housing instability or pursue legal remedies when conditions deteriorate.

(3) Existing enforcement mechanisms rely heavily on tenant complaints, placing the burden on tenants to identify, report, and pursue remedies for violations, often at personal risk. This reactive system allows serious code violations to persist undetected and unaddressed for extended periods. Furthermore, tenants consistently face retaliation for speaking out about unsafe conditions.

(4) A majority of tenants lack access to legal representation or the financial means to enforce their rights, resulting in widespread under-enforcement of existing housing standards and allowing non-compliant landlords to continue collecting rent despite failing to maintain habitable properties. In eviction court, 80-85% of landlords have legal representation while only 5-8% of tenants do.

(5) The current rental licensing system does not adequately ensure ongoing compliance with housing standards, nor does it provide sufficient transparency to tenants regarding the condition and legal status of their housing.

(6) Strengthening licensing requirements, establishing proactive inspections, improving transparency, and creating meaningful enforcement mechanisms, including a private right of action, are necessary to ensure that all rental housing meets basic standards of safety and habitability.

(7) Tenant advocates report a myriad of eviction filings in Philadelphia Municipal Court, and in many cases, eviction judgments entered against tenants, for properties where there are open code violations and deficiencies in rental licenses and certificates of rental suitability.

(8) It is the intent of Council to shift from a reactive, complaint-driven system to a proactive and accountable framework that ensures compliance before harm occurs, empowers tenants to enforce their rights, and aligns economic incentives so that bad actor landlords cannot continue to profit from unsafe or unlawful conditions.

(9) These reforms are necessary to protect public health, reduce displacement, and promote housing stability in Philadelphia’s housing system.

SECTION 24. Title 9 of The Philadelphia Code is hereby amended to read as follows:

(.1) Delayed re-inspection of premises. An owner shall not be deemed non-compliant for purposes of this Section for any period during which the owner's inability to obtain or maintain a rental license or Certificate of Rental Suitability results primarily from a delayed re-inspection by the Department. An owner shall be deemed compliant as of the date the owner completed the required corrective action and took all reasonable steps to obtain or maintain the required license or Certificate of Rental Suitability, provided that the owner demonstrates by a preponderance of the evidence that:

(.a) The owner timely corrected the underlying condition or deficiency;

(.e) A subsequent inspection confirms the condition was corrected.

(.2) Pending appeal of certain taxes, liens, fines, and fees resulting in outstanding balances. An owner shall not be deemed non-compliant for purposes of this Section for any period during which a timely appeal is pending and not yet adjudicated regarding taxes, liens, fines, and fees unrelated to a Title 4 violation that form an outstanding balance on the owner's business tax account that would otherwise prevent license issuance, provided that the owner demonstrates by a preponderance of the evidence that:

(.a) In the case of a violation that leads to a tax, lien, fine or fee, the underlying violation was not issued under Title 4 and does not involve conditions classified as Unsafe, Unfit, or Imminently Dangerous;

(.g) In any action for eviction, recovery of possession, or collection of rent or other charges relating to a property subject to this Section, the owner shall attach to the initial filing a copy of any pending appeal described in this subsection and shall affirmatively disclose the existence and status of such appeal. Failure to attach and disclose as required by this paragraph shall render the filing defective for purposes of this Section until cured.

For purposes of this subsection, if the appeal is denied in full, the period of non-compliance shall be deemed to run from the original cure date.

(.3) Renewal of Rental License. An owner shall not be deemed noncompliant for purposes of this Section solely for failure to timely renew a rental license during the fifteen (15) days immediately following the expiration of such license, provided that the owner obtains a valid renewal within such period.

(.42) No provision of this Section shall limit an owner's ability to bring a claim for property damage or breach of contract.
