Room 402, City Hall
Philadelphia

(Resolution No. 240717)

RESOLUTION

Authorizing a task force to advance recommendations and coordinate initiatives to ensure that all people in Philadelphia are able to exercise their fundamental right to bodily autonomy and reproductive freedom.

WHEREAS, Access to safe and affordable reproductive healthcare is a human right; and

WHEREAS, In a radical political decision, the US Supreme Court stripped away long-standing constitutional protections for reproductive rights; and extremist lawmakers across the country are enacting a multitude of dangerous and cruel restrictions on fundamental bodily rights; and

WHEREAS, The state of Pennsylvania for decades has imposed medically unnecessary and stigmatizing barriers to abortion care, including a ban on insurance coverage of abortion care for patients using Medicaid, a mandatory waiting period, state scripted “counseling” designed to dissuade patients from terminating their pregnancies, a requirement for parental consent or a court order for minors seeking care, and many onerous regulations on providers that have no bearing on patient health or safety; and

WHEREAS, In the face of these looming threats, City Council and Mayor Parker have worked to allocate millions of additional dollars to help Philadelphians access reproductive care, but more needs to be done to ensure all can receive the healthcare and support they need; and

WHEREAS, The denial of reproductive care can have immense socioeconomic effects, particularly for those already facing economic difficulties, leading to significantly higher rates of bankruptcies, evictions, and court judgments; and

WHEREAS, The mortality rate among Black people who are pregnant is already four times higher than the rate for those who are white, with Black women making up 73% of pregnancy-related deaths in one recent study, and studies show that abortion bans only increase this unjust divide; and

WHEREAS, Comprehensive reproductive health care encompasses access to abortion and contraception, as well as access information and services related to uterine, menstrual, and sexual health, which are critical for the overall well-being and autonomy of individuals who menstruate; and

WHEREAS, Access to quality uterine, menstrual, and sexual health care is essential for preventing and managing conditions such as endometriosis, fibroids, polycystic ovary syndrome (PCOS), and other reproductive health issues that significantly impact individuals' quality of life, mental health, and economic stability; and

WHEREAS, The stigma and lack of education surrounding uterine, menstrual, and sexual health issues can lead to inadequate care, misdiagnosis, and a lack of understanding about these conditions, which disproportionately affect Black, Indigenous, and other communities of color, exacerbating existing health disparities; and

WHEREAS, Reproductive health and freedom also include access to healthcare for trans and nonbinary Philadelphians, including gender-affirming care; and

WHEREAS, Philadelphia is facing a surge of out-of-state patients seeking reproductive healthcare services, particularly abortion, due to bans in their home states, straining the limited resources of providers and advocates in Pennsylvania; and

WHEREAS, Local providers of reproductive healthcare and those seeking this care routinely face death threats, bomb scares, online and in-person harassment, physical threats, and abuse by increasingly emboldened anti-abortion extremists; and

WHEREAS, The City of Philadelphia recognizes the need for inclusive reproductive healthcare that addresses the full spectrum of reproductive health needs, including menstrual equity, ensuring that all individuals have access to menstrual products, education, and medical care regardless of their economic status; and

WHEREAS, Comprehensive reproductive health education that includes uterine, menstrual and sexual health is critical in empowering individuals to make informed decisions about their health and well-being, and in promoting bodily autonomy and gender equality; and

WHEREAS, It is critical that we do all we can to protect those who seek, provide, and support reproductive care, and to expand access to this care; now, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, THAT THE COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF PHILADELPHIA, Shall continue and deepen its efforts to fund and expand access to reproductive healthcare, particularly for those who cannot afford services or are denied the ability to use their insurance to cover costs, and to support organizations providing critical reproductive health services.
