Amending Title 17 of The Philadelphia Code, entitled “Contracts and Procurement,” by providing for a price preference for American-made supplies, materials and equipment purchased by the City and recipients of City financial assistance; and making technical amendments all under certain terms and conditions.

WHEREAS, In the face of the most severe labor market downturn since the Great Depression, recovery of American jobs has been slow and not uniform across the country or across sectors. In particular, high-wage positions like manufacturing have fared worse in the Philadelphia metropolitan region than in surrounding regions; and

WHEREAS, The negative economic effects of the recession on American jobs are compounded by the increasing globalization of the production of goods. Nearly sixty percent of all goods consumed in America are made overseas. As a result, the United States has fewer manufacturing jobs in 2012 than in 1941. To bolster employment in this sector, economists recommend an increase in American-made goods: they estimate that if every American spent an extra $3.33 on American-made goods per year, it would create almost 10,000 new American jobs; and

WHEREAS, Philadelphia’s targeted use of its procurement policies can help bolster the number of Americans employed by the manufacturing industry. The City currently procures most goods by requiring vendors to bid, with the lowest bidder winning the contract. If the winning bid does not account for whether the products being purchased are American-made, American workers and businesses lose; and

WHEREAS, Such a policy rewards the lowest bidder without consideration of the origin of the provider’s products. It emphasizes the short-term benefit to the City without due consideration of the long-term positive economic impacts that accrue to the country as a whole when purchasing American-made products; and

WHEREAS, In contrast, this Ordinance establishes a price preference policy that levels the playing field for goods that are made in Philadelphia, in the State of Pennsylvania, and in the United States of America. Such a policy leverages the City's financial resources to help American workers achieve gainful employment, encourages American businesses to increase their output, and allows the City of Philadelphia to regain revenue from the wages and other assessments of those workers and businesses; and

WHEREAS, Many legislatures on the federal, state and local levels have already recognized the opportunity and implemented similar policies. The Buy American Act of 1933 and the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009 establish federal guidelines for procuring American-made goods. At the state level, more than twenty states have "Buy American" laws that affect public procurement, and many more have legal preferences for in-state or local bidders. And a great diversity of municipal governments, from Madison, Wisconsin to Los Angeles, California, have implemented local-preference procurement policies.

WHEREAS, This Ordinance is enacted to further leverage the City's purchasing power, to serve as inspiration to the citizens of our City and nation to buy American products, and to support American workers and businesses as the country recovers from a devastating financial recession; now, therefore
