WHEREAS, In 2025, civil lawsuits were reported in multiple states alleging that children were groomed and exploited after initial contact occurred on gaming platforms, with communications in some instances continuing across other online services; and

WHEREAS, In the same year, several state Attorneys General filed or announced enforcement actions against gaming or communications platforms alleging failures related to child safety protections and representations made to users and parents; and

WHEREAS, In December 2025, the United States Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation centralized numerous federal cases involving allegations of child sexual exploitation connected to a major gaming platform, including cases originating from Pennsylvania; and

WHEREAS, These proceedings involve allegations that have not yet been fully resolved; however, they reflect widespread concerns regarding online child safety and the potential for exploitation; and

WHEREAS, City Council has an interest in understanding how these risks affect children locally and how City agencies, schools, families, and community organizations can better prevent harm and respond when incidents occur; and
